HELPING FAMILIES WITH AUTISTIC CHILDREN

Statistics have proven that over 48% of children with autism who receive intervention therapies before the age of five will have a significant decrease in signs and symptoms of autism by the age of 10. Cepia is happy to support the autism services provided by Life Skills / Touchpoint Autism Services, particularly the early intervention parent training program known as ADAPT. ADAPT is a two-week intensive behavior therapy course for families dealing with autism that can also be used to help the child and family on a moment's notice throughout the child's lifetime. The experts at Life Skills | TouchPoint Autism Services help families increase communication skills through structured play and resolve problem behaviors with appropriate techniques in various situations
